Very truly yours, How Mary Anderson Smokes.

[From a Cleveland Herald interview.]
Mary Anderson is one of the strangest combinations that I ever saw; at times she is a woman, then again she appears like a child, only to change herself into a person having the airs and ways of a sophomore at college. She is a Roman Catholic, you know, and some days she will begin the campaign by an attendance at early mass, from which she returns with a superfluity of childish spirits, and cuts up all manner of pranks upon the members of her troupe. By the time this phase of her character has been displayed, she feels tired and seeks the solace of a cigarette, and I remember one day standing opposite the hotel, and noticing a cloud of smoke coming out of The best Tanks made. a third-story window, naturally looking up to discover the source. MONTREAL, CAN., August 25, 1882.

As might have been expected, I find Montreal, socially, in strong contrast with Cincinnati, where the Association met last year. The latter city, of rapid growth and wonderful commercial progress, is strongly and essentially Democratic and American in its social relations, while in Montreal, older and more historic, and with closer relations to the lands of lords and ladies, there is a decided aristocratic tinge. I see this notably in the receptions, of which we have had several. have had several.

"Major-General Graham, commanding London, August 29.—General Wolseley telegraphs from Kassassin Lock as follows:

"Major-General Graham, commanding this post, was attacked yesterday evening by about twelve guns and eight battalions. Our men behaved entremely well and inflicted severe loss upon the enemy. At first General Graham had but five guns, two and a half battalions, and a small detachment of cavalry and mounted infantry. Being reinforced by another battalion, he attacked the enemy in front, while the First Cavalry Brigade, under Colonel Sit Baker Russell, charged them on the flank, asabring a considerable number. The cavalry were well handled by Major-General Druy Low. General Graham's dispositions were all that they should have been, and his operations were carried out with the cooiness for which he has always been well known. Arabi Pacha was on the field during the action. The cavalry charged by moonlight, but were unable to secure the rebel guns, which the enemy withdrew during the night. They left, however, all their ammunition. All our killed are Surgeon-Major Shaw, of the Sixth Marine artillery, and one infantry surgeon. The geon-Major Shaw, of the Sixth Marine artillery, and one infantry surgeon. The wounded are one major, two captains, two licutenants, and difty-six men."
